

Letters to MAPS

Dear MAPS...

I chose to send my support because we in the scientific community need to know more about all of these substances. Their use continues to grow, yet our knowledge about them remains fossilized (i.e. LSD-1970s, MDMA-1980s). Ignorance is not bliss. It is my hope that MORE researchers WILL be permitted access to these drugs that are LARGELY only available on the black market.

– John Gianoli, M.D.

Having received the latest (MAPS) Bulletin, I felt like a lost sailor spotting land after drifting at sea. The human mind is a miraculous thing. Coupled with spirit, it has the capacity to endure and overcome some of the most trying of circumstances. I look forward to seeing this place in my rear view mirror, and swimming in a sea of peaceful, good vibrations. Keep up the good work.

By no means am I a rich benefactor, but I do a fair amount of charitable giving nevertheless, primarily to environmental organizations, including my own non-profit, since I think that, without a viable planet, all else means little to humanity. However, I believe that people are the main problem for the environment and nothing less than a psychedelic revival has the potency to awaken the masses enough for us to collectively stop industrially defecating on our own habitat. Ergo, MAPS deserves more support and I will see what I can do.

I donate more to MAPS than any other group because the research that MAPS supports is a vital part of the radical transformation that humanity must experience to survive and flourish. Any methods that help people to see beyond a limited worldview and embrace a more authentic, primal, and loving life are worth pursuing.
